Price vs. open interest pattern

Short covering likely to take stock higher

- The Pharma space has remained largely range bound in the last couple of months with stocks like Cadila Healthcare underperforming the market. Currently, stock is trading near its support base and we believe that current levels provides good risk reward opportunity. After remaining range bound for some time, we believe that the recent up move is likely to continue towards ₹ 540 in the coming weeks.
- On the F&O front, the open interest in the stock is relatively low compared to the last couple of months and remained almost unchanged after September. However, with the ongoing price consolidation, we saw marginal closure of positions suggesting short covering. Since the stocks is making formation near its support we believe fresh long positions may be formed, which should take the stock higher in the coming trading sessions
- On the options front, after significant writing was seen in 460 Call, the highest Call OI base is at 500 strike for December series. However, closure is visible at ATM Call strikes of 460 strike. With initial sign of closure among Call writers, we expect the stock to be well placed to test its Call base of 500 in December Series. On the other hand, significant Put OI was seen in 460 and 450 strikes that should act as support on downsides
- The stock may see a pick-up in the uptrend after remaining in the range of ₹ 450-480 for more than three weeks. It has been holding above the crucial lower range of ₹ 450. Now, momentum may return in the stock as short positions have started covering. Also, in the first second of December series, Call writers are covering their positons. This is an early sign of breakout from the said trading range .
- Looking at the significant delivery volume activity around ₹ 430-460 in April 2021 and now in December 2021, we expect these levels to act as strong support in the near term. In such a scenario, the positive bias may continue in the stock till these levels are held.
